

ANA MATRONIC

The Scissor Sisters singer on a few of her favourite things

BEDSIDE READING

Comic books

I'm a massive fan of Madame Xanadu, a 40s-set series about a conjuror involved in all sorts of spiritual high jinks. Just a Couple of Days by Tony Vigorito An amazing book about everything. You can tell the author had a great deal of fun.

GUILTY PLEASURES

Pastries, profiteroles and chocolate

Anything that makes me feel like I'm having a gall bladder attack afterwards is my poison, for sure.

HOLIDAY DESTINATION

Belize

My husband and I stayed in San Pedro a few years ago in a little cabana and just disappeared for ten days.

IPOD ESSENTIALS

Black and Tan Fantasy by Duke Ellington

I've grown fond of music from the 20s and 30s. Walking around New York listening to this is fun – it's got a great plodding bass.

James Holden

He's a British dance DJ who has a mix album I love and listen to a lot.

Fembot by Robyn

An amazing track.

I saw her singing it on a Swedish TV show and thought it was really smart, sophisticated pop music.

Ana loves horror movies, bitchy blogs and champagne cocktails

TOP TELLY

Damages

I tape the whole season and then watch it in one go – it's so addictive!

HOT HANGOUTS

Madame JoJo's, London

I've never had a bad time – the dancefloor is small but dedicated because it's sunken.

Trophy, Brooklyn

I love the Parker Posey champagne cocktails at this bar run by my friends.

BOOKMARKS

jezebel.com

I visit this blog almost every day because I love the critical way it looks at pop culture.

gofugyourself.com

These ladies have similar opinions to me on what's acceptable to wear. Romper suits do not look good on a grown woman!

FILMS

Last Year at Marienbad (1961)

It's a visually arresting French new-wave film.

Beyond the Valley of the Dolls (1970)

All the women in it are the most strong, amazing, plot-driving forces.

The Orphanage (2007)

I love horror. My mum read Stephen King when I was a kid and introduced me to it.

FASHION FAVOURITE

Machine-A, Soho, London

It stocks small designers and avant-garde pieces. I go every time I'm in town.

The Scissor Sisters' latest album, Night Work, is out now.
